HEALING THE BABES

"The Evening World" Physician Makes His First Visits.

Ailing Children of the Big Tenements Receive Free Treatment.

Pathetic Pictures of Child Life Among the Very Poor.

The first of the daily visits of The Evening World physician to the Genements of the poor, in an endeavor to save the lives of the sick children who there abound, was made yesterday.

The section of the city visited is located in the Twelfth Police Precinct, which is almost entirely a tenement-house district.

At the Delancey street station-house the Sergeant in charge directed THE EVENING WORLD physician and the reporter to Goerck street and Suffolk street as the most promising field for the work. In both streets there are towering tenements filled to overflowing with human beings; families of six to a dozen being crowded into two or three small, ill ventilated rooms. HAD ALBEADY HEARD OF IT.

English is, perhaps, the least spoken of any language in this section, but THE EVEN-ING WORLD doctor could wind his tongue around a few German words, and be learned from the people that he called upon that they already knew of THE EVENING WORLD'S charitable enterprise in furnishing a physician free for the children of the poor, and some said they had been expecting his visit.

some said they had been expecting his visit. A big block of tenements on the east side of Goerck street, between Delancey and Rivington streets, was the first visited.

Something less than a hundred little ones were playing about on the sidewalk and in the gutter, while babies galore reposed in the laps of mothers who were airing themselves in the front doorways.

"Are there any children sick here?" was the question asked of the women who sat at the doors.

One woman said that there was a little sick baby in No. 56, and into that tenement The EVENING WORLD men-doctor and reporter went.

A WORFUL BIT OF HUMANITY.

There was the beby, a little bundle of skin and bones of about five pounds weight—a woeful looking object—fussing and crying in its weak way in the arms of its mother.

The child had suffered from diphtheria, and had never recovered fully from the effects of that disease.

The mother declared her inability to pay a physician for his services, and the babe's illness was prescribed for.

By this time it was generally known that The Evening World's physician was in the building and his services were in constant demand for ailing babies.

On the third floor a little girl baby in a family named Gutmann was ill with intestinal trouble, and she was looked after, the mother saying that her husband was in New Jersey and that she had been unable to employ a physician to aftend her child.

On the same floor a little boy lately recovered from the measles was very ill with a stomach trouble, and on the floor below a little girl was suffering the double affliction of a bronchial difficulty and an intestinal disorder.

All declared their inability to employ a A WORFUL BIT OF HUMANITY.

All declared their inability to employ physician—for The Eventso World does not desire, in the furtherance of this charitable purpose, to interfere with the practice of any physician—and each was given a prescrip-tion, which was honored by the Eastern Dispensary at Grand and Essex streets.

IN THE ABODE OF POVERTY. They need not have declared their poverty. It was apparent in their dress and the scanty furniture of their narrow apartments. A bed, two or three chairs or stools; these comprised about all of the furniture where THE EVENING WORLD representatives were admitted. Occasionally an oil stove was found, but frequently the only arrangement for cooking consisted of some bricks piled up loosely in a fireplace on which meat might be broiled or fried.

It was growing dark when the doctor left the vicinity of Goerck street, and but little time was left for the few visits which were made at the big tenements in Suffolk street, This neighborhood will be revisited by the
